

Hello Everyone!

My name is Mrs Richardson and I have a son with additional needs.

As parents of children with SEN it can at times, feel defeating, tiresome, and lonely. The process is long with many hurdles to overcome. Some days it takes all your energy to muster the courage and determination to keep battling.

Being a Parent SEN advocate is something I feel extremely passionate about. I'd like to offer opportunities for informal meetings amongst other parents of children with SEN to listen, share life experiences amongst other likeminded parents/carers in a non-judgmental, supportive environment.

Equally, I would like to support parents in meetings who may benefit or wish for some additional support. It can be stressful and overwhelming talking about your child's additional needs – I want to alleviate that by supporting your voice your opinions, issues, or concerns.

We may all be experiencing different journeys with our children but knowing we are amongst others who knows what it feels like to have a child/ren with SEN will create solidarity and make the journey seem less lonely.

I look forward to meeting you all! 😊
